

Intellectual Property Litigation

Protecting valuable technology and intellectual property rights often requires litigation. McGinnis Lochridge lawyers have represented clients' interests across the spectrum of high-stakes intellectual property litigation, including patent and trademark infringement; copyright; trade-secret misappropriation; licensing, fabrication and manufacturing flaws; and other commercial technology disputes.

Our lawyers have worked as local counsel on numerous patent infringement cases, primarily in Austin and Waco. These have involved representation of a variety of clients in technologies as varied as streaming devices, OLED and SED technology, semiconductor manufacturing, software, subscription video on demand, Blu-Ray and DVDs, oil field technology, retail gift cards, phone apps and others.

Our technology litigation clients include Fortune 500 companies, emerging-growth companies, privately-held companies, partnerships and individuals. The lawyers of our Intellectual Property Practice Group work closely with clients to ensure that their business goals are met, whether by litigation or via negotiated settlement.
